Butzel Long Shareholder Les Glick to Present Trade Seminar on Section 301 and Section 232 to Illinois SBDC International Trade Center at Bradley University

5.3.2021

Les Glick, co-chair of the Butzel Long International Trade and Customs Specialty Team will be presenting an hour long seminar to the Bradley University , Illinois SBDC International Trade Center, Turner Center for Entrepreneurship on Thursday May 6, 2021. Les was invited to focus on section 301 of the Trade Act of 1974 and Section 232 of the Trade Expansion Act of 1962 areas where high tariffs have been imposed on many US importers since 2018.

A description of the program, which is free to attend is set out below;

Learn How to Navigate the Section 301 And Section 232 Tariff Process.

The Illinois SBDC International Trade Center at Bradley University is excited to announce a training event on Understanding the Section 301 and section 232 tariff process.

Importers and Exporters may have some familiarity with Section 301 because of products made in China being subject to high duties during the last administration. However, Section 301 has a long history and has been used as an effective trade tool for years by domestic industries but has sometimes been criticized as too broad by importers and consumers. Section 301 currently is used to address intellectual property issues along with market access to US companies and can be used for a wide range of products. There have been some exclusions from the recent duties on China but this process has ended. Section 232 tariffs on steel and aluminum have also affected many companies. The exclusion process on these items is still open and partially retroactive. What changes can we expect in the new administration? We would like to invite you to our Section 301 webinar with speaker Mr. Leslie Alan Glick, Attorney and co-chair
